ONE ON THE POMPOUS JUDGE

Sarcastic Denunciation of Sleeping Juror Brings Startling and Discomforting Reply.

The lawyer for the prosecution had finished his closing argument and the judge, a pompous and long-winded individual, was charging the jury:

He was in the midst of an unusually long and tedious address when he suddenly noticed that one of the jurymen had fallen asleep. The indignation of his honor was boundless. Rapping sharply on his deak he awakened the slumberer, who seemed not at all abashed at being thus caught napping. After glaring at him angrily for a few moments, the magistrate in his most sareastic tone said:

"So that's the way you attend to your duty, is it? You're a fine specimen to have on a jury. Do you think your opinion will be of any value when I send you out to determine the fate of this prisoner?"
"Yes, sir," said the juryman quiefly,

"Oh, you do, do you?" shouted the exasperated judge. "Pray tell me, sir, how long have you been sleeping?"

The oculist suits the treatment to the eye, and it is better to err on the side of going to him without reason than to stay away when there may be need to go.

Considering the delicate mechanism of the eye, it is astonishing how much abuse it bears. Women go about peering through vells of heavy and intricate patterns, most harmful to the vision. Both men and women read constantly in street cars, than which nothing is worse. Children are allowed to read in insufficient light and in the gloaming. And seldom indeed does anyone take care, when reading or working, to be in the right position with regard to the light.
